

Case Study

Building a Multicultural Brand Narrative Through Experience Design

Strategic Intent

Create a fictional music festival rooted in Angel Island's history as an immigration gateway.

Explore how brand identity can celebrate cultural diversity.

Audience & Positioning

Target culturally curious, young professionals seeking global identity and shared belonging.

Position festival as a convergence of global influence rather than genre-specific event.

Creative System

Island map integrates cultural artifacts symbolizing migration and cross-cultural exchange.

Lineup intentionally curated to reflect cross-cultural musical influence rather than genre silos.

Clerestory reflects a commitment to celebrating global musical artistry with a diverse assemblage of electrifying house music from various cultures.

Brand Extension

Merchandise, packaging, and banners extend visual system consistently across touchpoints.

Partnered with Blue Bottle Coffee to reinforce Bay Area roots and extend the brand into a culturally relevant lifestyle touchpoint.

Strategic Takeaway

Cultural storytelling must be grounded in place and meaning. Symbolism without narrative feels decorative. When rooted in history and identity, it creates emotional resonance and belonging.
